Is Madras fast becoming...

The medical capital?

(By a Special Correspondent)

The recent open-heart surgery performed on a 16-hour-old "blue baby" by Dr K M Cherian of the Madras Medical Mission's Institute of Cardio-Vascular Diseases created medical history in India when the infant got a second lease of life. A few days earlier he had operated on the seven-day-old daughter of a Dubai-based Pakistani couple. Both incidents focus on the skills available at the Institute - a department functioning in the Vijaya Hospital that has earned, as far as the international reputation is acquiring.

But this is not only the medical facility in Madras that is giving the city an international name in South, Southeast and West Asia for medicine. There are several other hospitals - and outstanding medical personalities - in Madras that are responsible for many beginning to describe the city as the "Medical Capital of India". Today, they come from all parts of India and many parts of the world to these centres of excellence.

Perhaps the first of these institutions to attract a nation's attention was the Premnatham Hospital. It was there that Dr K M Cherian, encouraged by Dr T T Cherian, first demonstrated his skills and, ever since, there have been several teams of doctors who've contributed to its reputation for heart and as well as other medical. Vijaya Hospital and KJ Hospital were among the first of a host of private hospitals that added to the city's reputation by introducing high tech medicine. Vijaya went even further when it established its luxuriant Health Centre in syrian surroundings.

Of this age is the sprawling M V Hospital Diabetes in Royapuram and the Sanjana Netharpana for cataract, both institutions renowned throughout India and in the neighbouring countries. The Cancer Institute in Adyar is another institution of national reputation.

Madras's "Harley Street". Poonammala High Road, today has so many private hospitals that several three star hotels have been established on the same road to cater to the numerous visitors and patients who are staying on while their kin are being treated. But nowhere has this concept of hotel and hospital been more fabulously treated than in Apollo Hospital, whose Hospital Sindoori neighbour boasts the huge medical facility.

While all the earlier mentioned hospitals have been enhancing Madras's medical reputation, it is Apollo which brought the city's medical facilities greater national attention. The success of Apollo as a business venture, the establishment by the same company of Apollo-type hospitals elsewhere in the country and its reputation for attracting back the city: the city has attracted abroad really put Madras on the medical map of India. That was when the rest of the country and beyond began to know that Madras had much more than Apollo.

Today, the Apollo success story continues. It is planning a major cancer (Continued on P5)

A new lease of life

(By S. Mathiath)

One of the most revered names in Indian printing has just undergone a name change. It is also undergoing a sea change. Both, it is hoped, will bring to the C.L.S. Press the high reputation it enjoyed in the heyday of the Dicorossan Press.

The Dicorossan Press, now rechristened the C.L.S. Press and as the press of formalisation, is the oldest printing press in India, founded in Veerappi, where it still is, in 1766. Its beginnings go back to "a hand-press and some cases of type and other printing equipment" that were part of the loot from Pondicherry that Gen. Eyrre Coote brought back to Madras from Pondicherry.

The Rev. Fabricius, then in charge of the activities of the Society for the Propagation of Christian Knowledge in Madras, had belonged to the Transvaal Mission which was responsible for reestablishing printing in India in 1722. Trained in this tradition, Fabricius asked Governor Pigot for this booty and promised to use it to print Government's requirements in the first year and use only the spare capacity for the SPCK's work. And so, in 1761, he became manager of a press known as the Company Press as well as the Veery Press.

When Fabricius expanded this press in 1766, with the help of the Transvaal Mission Press, he was able to establish two distinct divisions in Veerappi. The new division was to develop into the SPCK Press and the Dicorossan Press and now the C.L.S. Press. The older division was returned to the Company in the late 1760s, moved to Fort St George and became the nucleus for Government Press, another Madras first in India.

The Veery Press became the Dicorressan Press when a Dicorossan Committee was set up to run it in 1815. This Committee sold the press to the American Board around 1850, but reacquired it in 1866 and has run it - and the Christian Literature Society - ever since.

Renowned for its several publications books and subsequent high quality of printing in the first half of the 20th Century, the Press fell on hard times in the last couple of decades when it could not keep pace with the modernisation going on in the rest of the printing industry in Madras. But even in those lean times it maintained its reputation for the best binding in the city, an area Madras has sadly been deficient in.

Now, after a management consultancy group had examined its workings and recommended an overhaul, the Dicorressan Press enjoy a new lease of life, even if it is in a changed name. It is to be hoped there will be no looking back now and that the Veery Press will regain its high reputation before long.

The oldest printing press in India, the Dicorrossan Press in Veerappi, not only has taken on a new name but, as The C.L.S. Press, also plans to take on a new, more up-to-date image. (Photograph by SUBRINTA NAIR)
Some security concerns

The Man from Mudah Madis was formed when these two individuals decided to work together in the day when political leaders from the Mudah Madis group were being harassed and put under constant worry about their safety. But we live in a world where such situations are common, and our security is being compromised due to the constant pressure from the Kabul government. The group has decided to continue its operations in the face of the Taliban threat.

COMPLIMENTS. Is it to see the man from Mudah Madis livin' up the town? She is an old friend of his and the American universities. Working LATE. The fact that he is not on the cover today doesn't mean you won't see him at the end of the road.

Hand's off, Men!

On the whole, the Man from Mudah Madis has been dealing with the threats to their lives. Their efforts should be applauded, and we should consider them for the important role they are playing in the country. Their dedication and courage are an inspiration to us all.

BEWARE OF MUTUAL FUNDS

A few of the Mutal Funds are in the market for Government Corporations, perhaps by the government or by the Ministry. There are many Mutual Funds that cannot sell in the open market. This is because the institution or the manager of a Mutual Fund will not continue to enjoy the same conditions as they do at the time of issue.

BULL'S EYE

The Mutual Funds which are now in their infancy and which, as yet, have not started their operations, are a good example of the Government's aims in this area. The Government, firstly for reasons of competition, cannot be in the position of competing

The medical capital?

In the city of Kabul, the medical capital is located in various parts of the country. However, the city of Kabul has more medical services than any other city in the country, which makes it the medical capital. The city is well-equipped with hospitals, clinics, and medical centers.

In the past, Kabul was considered the medical capital of Afghanistan because it had more medical facilities than any other city. However, over the years, other cities in the country have also become well-equipped with medical facilities. Today, Kabul remains the medical capital due to its long-standing reputation and its continued efforts to provide quality medical care to the people of Afghanistan.

Blow that bubble!

All those people who spend their time writing to the Editor asking questions such as "Whither the country?" or "Whither yourself?" or complaining that the poets and playwrights lack civic and government hospitals. Tantipalae and the government are quite capable of taking the necessary measures to prevent the destruction of the city. In fact, the citizens of Mambo are feeling quite safe dancing their way into the UJ, led by the "UJ Roughs". But their collection of 78 rpm records. The "Drains" of Woodstock is acclaimed as the first in the kind; a delightful little song, accompanied by the cardboard Pot and Container restoration before the "UJ Roughs" are back for more. But half of them are now killed. Keenly Nelson.

But, although I am not a citizen of Mambo, I am very fond of the city. In fact, I am very fond of the people of Mambo. I have known them for many years and have been among them in my travels. I have known them to be a fine people. They have always been kind to me and have always been ready to help me. They are a fine people, the people of Mambo. They are a fine people.

Navin Bhojwani’s column is dedicated to do something about it. She is a great believer in the potential of drama to focus attention on the burning issues of the day. She has always seen creative cinema as a powerful medium of education and empowerment. And she is among the very few people who have realized the dreams of an ordinary filmmaker. She has been able to build a career in cinema, and has devoted her life to helping others do the same. Her work is an inspiration to everyone who believes in the power of storytelling to bring about change.

One of the 1991 Deepawali releases was Khushi, featuring charismatic actor and exceedingly successful Navneet Nishan. But even in this film there was a song and dance number [a visual cliché in Tamil cinema] that had to be removed from that particular song sequence. It was a song called ‘Khushi’ and it had been removed in the final cut from the film. That was the last time such a thing has happened in recent times.

In the Tamil film industry, political inclination of any kind has to be avoided at all costs. This is the reason why political parties do not allow their politicians to enter the film industry.

A celebration that made history

When the Tamil Nadu Cricket Association advertised its diamond jubilee in magnificent manner — though amidst the tightest-ever security measures the city had witnessed — it threatened history in more ways than one. It became the country’s first sports body to earn the distinction of having the President of India as its chief guest at a jubilee function. And it was also the first time the President of India, the concerned Smt. Vijayalakshmi Pandit, and the Prime Minister of the President of India, the Prime Minister of India, had been invited to attend the function.

The President of the Tamil Nadu Cricket Association, the President of the Tamil Nadu Cricket Association, the Prime Minister of India, and the Prime Minister of India, were all present at the function, which was a grand affair. The function was attended by a galaxy of personalities from the world of cricket, including the former Prime Minister of India, who had been invited as the chief guest.

The celebrations were marked by a number of events, including a parade of the Tamil Nadu Cricket Association’s most memorable moments, a special performance by the Tamil Nadu Cricket Association’s mascot, and a special address by the President of India.

The celebrations were a grand success, and the Tamil Nadu Cricket Association was hailed as a great achievement by the cricketing world.
